

Innovation in Recovered Metals

Emil  Schroth
Metal Recovery Since 1931

Generating Value for Clients and Customers

Supply Clients

Wire and cable production operations generate scrap as processes are set up or certain products become obsolete due to design changes. Emil Schroth works hard to maximize the conversion of that scrap into recovery payments which help our Supply Clients be more sustainable and profitable.

Large companies that process huge tonnages of scrap with less than optimal recovery cannot provide personalized service for scrap providers. We are a small company focused intently on maximizing the recovery percentage for wire and cable production operations. We generate value for manufacturers.

Customers

Our Customers are brokers, exporters, brass mills, powder & pigment companies, foundries and other producers who use scrap metals as their raw materials. They require specific form factors to be as efficient as possible at converting our supply into deliverable products. So we concentrate on providing a wide range of metal grades in a variety of forms as listed below. Our customers also require orchestrated delivery timing to properly manage their inventory and cash flow.

We have built a transportation logistics network that provides the kind of flexibility we need to consistently deliver just in time.

Generating Value for Clients and Customers

When Emil A. Schroth, Sr. founded our company in 1931, he created a working methodology focused on two corporate relationships: Supply Clients, who are manufacturing firms with process scrap requiring recovery, and Customers who purchase recovered metals in various forms as the raw material for their businesses. Services for Supply Clients centered on innovative metal recovery techniques that maximized their recovery value and made payments quickly to optimize their cash flow. Services for Customers generated the form factors they needed to use the recovered non ferrous metals in their delivered products. Today, we continue that same methodology with a lean, cost effective workforce dedicated to the same honesty and integrity that have been the company's hallmark for over 85 years.

By recovering the scrap from our Supply Clients' processes, we are conserving the earth's resources and turning scrap into usable commodities. That generates value for Supply Clients and Customers alike. We are proud and honored to be of service.
